Welcome

Linking Social, Cultural and Physical Ecologies

Welcome to the 81st annual meeting of the Society for Applied Anthropology, its first ever all-virtual meeting. The original meeting location of Norfolk, VA, was also a first as a meeting site for SfAA, but these challenging times necessitated the move to a virtual platform. We have, however, retained as much as possible of the flavor of Norfolk in the theme itself, which emphasizes multiple levels of influence on communities and peoples, and in the sessions and critical conversations scheduled for local day on March 22, as well as throughout the week. Norfolk is part of the larger Hampton Roads metropolitan area, one of the world's largest natural harbors and shipping centers, a tourist destination, a major coastal watershed affected by climate change, site of several large military bases, a center of colonial history and the legacy of slavery, and home to African-descendant and multiple indigenous communities. As such, Norfolk is a microcosm for the forces and changes affecting communities across the globe. For these reasons, the meeting theme of Linking Social, Cultural and Physical Ecologies encompasses a wide range of critically important issues for social science in these times, including the COVID-19 pandemic, climate change, natural and human-made disasters, social justice, health equity, racism and discrimination. Moreover, at a time when travel is difficult for so many and connection is so important, the virtual format enables wide participation from social scientists in both the U.S. and around the globe. We currently have over 1,100 registrants from 33 countries and 49 states.

We are excited about a packed program, hosted through a virtual meeting platform called Whova, which provides a variety of features supporting both interactive live-streamed and pre-recorded sessions, meet-ups, and posters. The program includes eight workshops prior to the main meeting (March 18 and 19), which runs from Monday, March 22, through Saturday, March 27. Sessions cover such topics as: responses to COVID-19, communities facing environmental concerns, risk and disaster issues, fisheries, sustainable communities, education, health and health care, immigration, anthropology of military institutions, gender-based violence, social justice, disabilities issues, African and other descendant communities. And be sure to sit in on a critical conversation session on Thursday, March 25, concerning the 2020 US Census.

The program contains 592 papers, to be presented in 146 organized sessions and 60 volunteered paper sessions, along with 37 posters, and 2 videos. The sessions add up to a full schedule from Monday through Saturday. The meeting also features a full complement of business meetings and award sessions, including the J. Anthony Paredes Memorial Plenary (Wednesday); the Robert A. and Beverly H. Hackenberg Prize and Lecture (Wednesday); the Peter K. New Award (Tuesday); the Michael Kearney Memorial Lecture (Wednesday); and the Pertti J. Pelto International Travel Award Lecture (Wednesday). There will be two Annual Awards Ceremonies – the 2020 awards will be presented on Tuesday and the 2021 awards on Wednesday--at which the winners of the Margaret Mead, Sol Tax, and Bronislaw Malinowski Awards for their respective years will be announced.

The virtual format offers a number of scheduling benefits. Volunteered papers have been organized into sessions that, while scheduled, are asynchronous and can be viewed at any time. Posters are also asynchronous, but with the opportunity for interaction with poster presenters. All session blocks are 1 hour and 45 minutes, with an additional 45 minutes of meet-up time per block for the live sessions.

Even though it is a virtual meeting, there will be a slate of local-day sessions on Monday, March 22, kicked off by a critical conversation on local coastal communities and their adaptation to flooding, followed by a critical conversation sponsored by faculty from the nearby College of William and Mary on controversies surrounding repatriation of African and Native American remains, and a session sponsored by the local U.S. National Park Service. The day is capped off by a virtual Welcome Reception, with remarks from the SfAA President and Program Chair, and a land acknowledgment from Tidewater-area Tribal Nations. There are also virtual tours available of Norfolk, Williamsburg, and local historical sites including Fort Monroe, where the first enslaved Africans landed in 1619.

Developing the program and migrating to a virtual platform has been a herculean task, spanning the past year and a half. As Program Chair, I conceptualized the theme, with backing from an outstanding Program Committee and support from the topical interest groups (TIGs) and co-sponsors, who assembled a rich and diverse program. This year's program owes a special debt of gratitude to the newly formed SfAA Meetings Working Group, headed by incoming President Michael Paolisso, which played a central role in managing the shift to a virtual format, and to the input and wise counsel provided by current President Sherylyn Briller. SfAA Annual Meeting and Awards Coordinator Don Stull provided essential guidance and assistance. And, of course, the SfAA Office is the backbone, managing myriad tasks so vital to the organization and the annual meeting-- SfAA Executive Director Neil Hann, Office Manager Trish Colvin, and Annual Meeting Program Administrator Melissa Cope (who also designed the program logo). They do so much for the Society for Applied Anthropology and its members, and with such grace and good cheer.

And finally, thank you for helping make SfAA 2021 a first-of-its-kind meeting, one that will be outstanding in its own right and provide a blueprint from which future meetings can draw, even when we return to our beloved in-person format.
